

Information for Candidates

1. The examination is held on 15th June 2023 at 10:00 AM.
2. The examination is held at the following address:
3. The examination is held at the following address:

4. The examination is held at the following address:
5. The examination is held at the following address:
6. The examination is held at the following address:
7. The examination is held at the following address:
8. The examination is held at the following address:

9. The examination is held at the following address:
10. The examination is held at the following address:
11. The examination is held at the following address:
12. The examination is held at the following address:
13. The examination is held at the following address:

14. The examination is held at the following address:
15. The examination is held at the following address:

16. The examination is held at the following address:
17. The examination is held at the following address:

18. The examination is held at the following address:

19. The examination is held at the following address:
20. The examination is held at the following address:
21. The examination is held at the following address:

22. The examination is held at the following address:
23. The examination is held at the following address:

24. The examination is held at the following address:
25. The examination is held at the following address:

26. The examination is held at the following address:
27. The examination is held at the following address:
28. The examination is held at the following address:
29. The examination is held at the following address:
30. The examination is held at the following address:

International Law

1. 1948
2. 1948
3. 1948

1. The United Nations Charter is the legal basis for the international legal system. It is a treaty that has been signed by 113 states. The Charter is the foundation of the United Nations and its organs. It sets out the purposes and principles of the United Nations and the powers of its organs. The Charter is the source of international law and is binding on all member states.
2. The United Nations Charter is the legal basis for the international legal system. It is a treaty that has been signed by 113 states. The Charter is the foundation of the United Nations and its organs. It sets out the purposes and principles of the United Nations and the powers of its organs. The Charter is the source of international law and is binding on all member states.
3. The United Nations Charter is the legal basis for the international legal system. It is a treaty that has been signed by 113 states. The Charter is the foundation of the United Nations and its organs. It sets out the purposes and principles of the United Nations and the powers of its organs. The Charter is the source of international law and is binding on all member states.
4. The United Nations Charter is the legal basis for the international legal system. It is a treaty that has been signed by 113 states. The Charter is the foundation of the United Nations and its organs. It sets out the purposes and principles of the United Nations and the powers of its organs. The Charter is the source of international law and is binding on all member states.
5. The United Nations Charter is the legal basis for the international legal system. It is a treaty that has been signed by 113 states. The Charter is the foundation of the United Nations and its organs. It sets out the purposes and principles of the United Nations and the powers of its organs. The Charter is the source of international law and is binding on all member states.

1. The following table shows the number of people who attended the school assembly in the first three weeks of the year. The number of people who attended the school assembly in the fourth week is 120. Calculate the number of people who attended the school assembly in the fourth week.

Table 1: 20

Table 1:

Table 1: 20