1. Intergovernmental relations – the relationship between the central government and the regional governments. It is a complex relationship, involving a number of different levels of government, and is often characterised by a degree of tension and conflict. The central government is responsible for the overall direction of the country, while the regional governments are responsible for the day-to-day running of the region. The relationship between the two is often characterised by a degree of tension and conflict, as the central government seeks to impose its will on the regions, while the regions seek to assert their independence.
