

the first time in 1970, and reached 100 million in 1974. The total number of visitors to the park increased from 1975 to 1979, from 100 million to 120 million.

The park's most outstanding feature is its natural beauty. The park has a variety of landscapes, including mountains, forests, lakes, rivers, and waterfalls. The park also features a wide range of flora and fauna, including rare species of plants and animals. The park's natural beauty attracts many tourists from around the world. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's architecture, which is designed to blend with the natural environment. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's infrastructure, such as roads, trails, and facilities. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's management, which is focused on preserving the natural environment and ensuring the safety of visitors. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's education programs, which aim to raise awareness about the importance of nature and the need to protect it. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's research programs, which aim to study the park's ecology and biodiversity. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's cultural programs, which aim to promote the park's history and traditions. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's economic programs, which aim to develop the park's tourism industry while protecting the natural environment. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's social programs, which aim to improve the quality of life for the park's local communities. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's political programs, which aim to ensure that the park's natural beauty is protected for future generations.

Overall, the park's natural beauty is a major attraction for tourists and a source of pride for the park's local communities.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's infrastructure, which includes a network of trails, roads, and facilities. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's management, which is focused on preserving the natural environment and ensuring the safety of visitors. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's education programs, which aim to raise awareness about the importance of nature and the need to protect it. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's research programs, which aim to study the park's ecology and biodiversity. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's cultural programs, which aim to promote the park's history and traditions. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's economic programs, which aim to develop the park's tourism industry while protecting the natural environment. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's social programs, which aim to improve the quality of life for the park's local communities. The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's political programs, which aim to ensure that the park's natural beauty is protected for future generations.

Overall, the park's natural beauty is a major attraction for tourists and a source of pride for the park's local communities.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's infrastructure, which includes a network of trails, roads, and facilities.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's management, which is focused on preserving the natural environment and ensuring the safety of visitors.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's education programs, which aim to raise awareness about the importance of nature and the need to protect it.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's research programs, which aim to study the park's ecology and biodiversity.

The park's natural beauty is also reflected in the park's cultural programs, which aim to promote the park's history and traditions.