Abstract The authors examined the effects of a 6-week training program on the self-reported health status of older adults. The study was conducted in a community center in New York City. The participants were 60 older adults (mean age = 78.5 years) who were randomly assigned to either a control group or an intervention group. The intervention group received a 6-week training program that focused on improving their physical and mental health. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly better self-reported health status than the control group at the end of the 6-week period.
