1. Conductivity is a measure of the ability of a material to conduct electricity. It is the reciprocal of resistance. The unit of conductivity is $\text{ohm}^{-1}\text{cm}^{-1}$. It is denoted by the symbol κ . The conductivity of a solution is directly proportional to the concentration of the electrolyte. The conductivity of a solution is also affected by the temperature. The conductivity of a solution increases with increasing temperature.

UNIVERSITY OF THE SAHARA

Faculty of Education | Department of Mathematics | BSc in Mathematics

1.1.1. Introduction

The purpose of this course is to provide students with a solid foundation in the theory and applications of mathematics, specifically focusing on the areas of algebra, geometry, and calculus.

Students are expected to have a good understanding of the basic concepts of mathematics, including sets, functions, and limits.

1.1.2. Course Objectives

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

- Understand the basic concepts of algebra, geometry, and calculus.
- Apply mathematical reasoning to solve problems.
- Communicate mathematical ideas effectively.

The course is designed to be a self-contained unit, meaning that students should be able to learn from the course materials without needing to consult other sources. However, it is recommended that students have a good understanding of the basic concepts of mathematics, including sets, functions, and limits, before starting this course.

The course is divided into three main sections: algebra, geometry, and calculus. Each section covers a range of topics, from basic concepts to more advanced applications. The course is designed to be a self-contained unit, meaning that students should be able to learn from the course materials without needing to consult other sources.

PROBABILITY, STATISTICS, AND INFERENCE

Chapter 1: Probability (Probability)

1.1. Sample Space

A sample space is a set of all possible outcomes of a random experiment. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the sample space is the set of numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. If we flip a coin, the sample space is the set of heads and tails. The sample space is denoted by S .

1.2. Sample Point

A sample point is an outcome of a random experiment. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the sample points are 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. If we flip a coin, the sample points are heads and tails. The sample points are denoted by s .

The probability of a sample point is the chance that it will occur. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the probability of rolling a 1 is $\frac{1}{6}$.

1.3. Probability of an Event

The probability of an event is the chance that it will occur. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the probability of rolling an even number is $\frac{3}{6} = \frac{1}{2}$.

1.4. Events

An event is a set of sample points. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the event of rolling an even number is the set of sample points {2, 4, 6}.

The probability of an event is the chance that it will occur. For example, if we roll a six-sided die, the probability of rolling an even number is $\frac{3}{6} = \frac{1}{2}$.

SCHOOL OF DISTANCE EDUCATION

1.1. Introduction/Overview

1.1.1. Introduction/Overview: purpose, scope, and objectives of the course

The purpose of this course is to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the principles and practices of distance education. The course is designed to equip students with the knowledge and skills necessary to effectively design, deliver, and evaluate distance education programs. The course is structured to provide students with a solid foundation in the field, covering topics such as the history and evolution of distance education, the role of technology in distance education, and the various models of distance education. The course is designed to be flexible and self-paced, allowing students to complete the course at their own pace and on their own schedule. The course is designed to be relevant and practical, providing students with the knowledge and skills they need to succeed in the field of distance education.
