ALFRED WENIG, L.A. UNIVERSITY OF THE WESTERN STATES

It has been noted that the British, French, and American governments have been unable to reach a consensus on the issue of the use of nuclear weapons. This is due to the fact that each country has its own interests and policies regarding nuclear weapons. The British government has a long history of nuclear disarmament, while the French government has a strong commitment to nuclear deterrence. The American government has a more complex position, as it has both a strong commitment to nuclear deterrence and a strong commitment to nuclear disarmament. This lack of consensus has led to a number of failed negotiations and has made it difficult to reach a global agreement on the use of nuclear weapons.
