

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

TO : The Board of Directors

FROM : The President

SUBJECT : The Board of Directors has received a letter from the Secretary of the State of New York, dated July 1, 1964, regarding the proposed merger of the New York State Thruway Authority and the New York State Power Authority. The letter is being forwarded to the Board for its consideration.

The letter from the Secretary of the State of New York is being forwarded to the Board for its consideration.

[Signature]

THE PRESIDENT

[Signature]

[Signature]

Introduction to the Study of the History of the United States

1. The Early Years

The early years of the United States were marked by a period of exploration and settlement. The first European settlers arrived in the late 15th century, and the first permanent English colony was established in 1607. The early years were characterized by a struggle for survival, as the settlers faced a harsh and unfamiliar environment. Despite these challenges, the settlers managed to establish a foothold in the New World, and the United States began to take shape.

The early years of the United States were also marked by a period of rapid growth and expansion. The population of the colonies increased rapidly, and the colonies began to assert their independence from Britain. This period of growth and expansion laid the foundation for the United States as we know it today.

2. The Revolutionary War

The Revolutionary War was a pivotal moment in the history of the United States. It was a struggle for independence from Britain, and it resulted in the birth of the United States as a sovereign nation. The war was fought between 1775 and 1783, and it was a difficult and bloody conflict. Despite the odds, the American forces emerged victorious, and the United States was born.

3. The Early Republic

The early Republic was a period of rapid growth and expansion. The population of the United States increased rapidly, and the United States began to assert its independence from Britain. This period of growth and expansion laid the foundation for the United States as we know it today.