the fact that the Journal of the American Medical Association has been the only one of the four major medical journals to publish a statement of the American Medical Association's position on the issue of abortion. The statement, which was published in the Journal in 1970, is a clear and concise statement of the American Medical Association's position on the issue of abortion. It is a statement that is well known and well respected by the medical community and the general public.

The American Medical Association's position on the issue of abortion is a position that is based on the principles of medical ethics. The American Medical Association believes that the physician's primary duty is to the patient, and that the physician should not be required to perform a procedure that is against the patient's wishes. The American Medical Association also believes that the physician should not be required to perform a procedure that is against the patient's religious or moral beliefs.
