Management consultants in Japan are in demand. However, the entry barrier is quite high for foreign firms, since to do business with the top 100 or 200 firms you have to be registered, required to incorporate and the firm has to be a Japanese one. Japanese clients do not prefer to work with non-Japanese firms, especially those controlled by an American, since the government is worried the client will mismanage it. So, you either have to incorporate in Japan, or have a Japanese partner. American governments should be aware of this. If you are not in the market to give your clients the choice of working with a Japanese firm, you are not in Japan. Thus,
